SPECIAL SECURITY DIVISION

Functions and Activities:

This Division is the covert operational arm of the Security Office and as such is responsible for the investigation of all applicants for open, semi-covert and covert assignments and for the evaluation of the evidence obtained through investigations of covert applicants to determine their suitability for employment or association with the Agency.

This Division through its Operations Branch analyzes and assigns for investigation all cases received from the Office of the Director of Personnel through the Security Division, Security Office, as well as all cases received from operational offices of CIA. It also directs in its assignment of cases to the field, the scope of and the "cover" requirements of the investigation. Continual control and follow-up of investigation progress is maintained by this Branch. Upon completion of personnel investigations the reports of covert cases are appraised and evaluated and a determination made of the suitability of applicants for employment from a security viewpoint. Reports of investigation of persons to be associated with but not considered employees of CIA on operational projects, are appraised and evaluated and the results of such reviews are furnished the operational office concerned. The open and semi-covert investigations are supervised on an individual and over-all basis to insure completeness and full coverage of the subject. Reports on open and semi-covert personnel are referred to the Security Division for appropriate action.

It maintains vigilance of counter-espionage activities by the covert collection, processing and evaluation of CE material gained through special investigations and inquiries; the review of existing CIA material, records and reports, and continuing liaison with operational offices of CIA.

It furnishes support to CIA operational activities by completing various requirements requested by CIA operational offices. These services are performed by its investigative and evaluation facilities, involving head-quarters and field offices and 25×1×4 vate organizations and individuals 126×1×4 ntractual relations.

SECURITY DIVISION

Functions and Activities:

This Division determines the scope of overt and semi-covert personnel security investigations to be made. It appraises and analyzes the reports of these types of investigations with respect to adequacy of coverage and the pertinency of the information and evidence bearing on the security aspects of each case and approves for employment or association with the Agency those applicants, consultants, contractors and other miscellaneous categories of persons within the overt or semi-covert categories or recommends their disapproval for security reasons. It operates a system of review and re-appraisal of employees and initiates action for termination of persons constituting security risks. It conducts interviews on security matters, maintains reference files and controls dissemination of personnel security information to other Agencies and Agency personnel. It conducts a program of exit briefings for personnel leaving the Agency as well as instructional briefings on security matters concerning employees departing for overseas stations. It approves from the security standpoint transfers of employees between components of the Agency. It recommends dismissal of Agency personnel who do not meet the prescribed standards.

The Division conducts interviews by means of general and special interrogation techniques to augment and assist personnel investigations as well as to assist in resolving other matters of an investigative nature. It maintains constant research and study of interrogation techniques used throughout the world for possible application in the CIA security program.

This Division devises, co-ordinates and enforces security policies, procedures and programs through personnel and physical security to provide for the safeguarding of classified information and intelligence material, sensitive intelligence sources of information and operational methods. It devises and executes building evacuation plans and procedures along with maintaining constant vigilance and continuing survey control of such plans and safety practices and procedures to insure the protection of classified material and Agency property and personnel. It maintains security liaison with other agencies.

This Division establishes physical security standards to safeguard classified information and material in the custody and control of the Agency and protect it from loss, theft or compromise either by inadvertence or by deliberate intent; safeguards Agency Headquarters installations against penetration by unauthorized persons, fire or natural
